

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF POLICE (ACP) PATIENCE ASHORKOR QUAYE

ACP Patience Ashorkor Quaye is dedicated to helping the young and old to alleviate human trafficking, domestic and sexual violence. Her passion stems from a trafficked child she rescued from Ghana to Nigeria as the case officer; an experience that changed her life forever, setting her on course to help, rescue and restore all such victims within her radar.

Having served as a law enforcement officer at a tender age, her many years' experience as an officer made her the competent focal person in Interpol Accra in charge of women and children issues. She made great contributions in community outreach programs working with both local and international NGO's. She usually touched-base with the youth (especially women and children) who were sensitized through mentoring, empowerment, counselling and skills programs on the dangers of domestic violence, human trafficking and other related crimes.

Her solid professional reputation earned her the respect, trust and cooperation from the local and international communities; with integrity, intelligence, compassion and excellence as her trailing hallmarks exhibited in all aspects of her life and career. Whether in Ghana or abroad, she has always been described as an epitome of a fearless advocate for women, children and the vulnerable in society, which gave her the platform to serve as an investigator and a resource person in many conferences and workshops both locally and abroad.

ACP Patience Ashorkor Quaye's exclusive passion for Justice, resonates with the high Values and Principles she holds for humanity and work respectively. She is very passionate about empowering young women to achieve their full potentials while contributing towards the development of their societies and the world at large. She has successfully led various teams to accomplish a number of projects; making her a proud recipient of a plethora of awards, colored with countless recognitions from reputable institutions and personalities from the local and international community.

With a Master's Degree in Public Administration and a cornucopia of Professional Training Experiences, she is a formidable repository of knowledge to train and arm all who desire to be in the forefront of the battle against domestic and gender-based violence and human trafficking in today's VUCA world. She is ever committed to promoting the Empowerment of Women, and indeed, in the Women's Hall of Fame, she is a game changer in breaking the glass ceiling in the quest to securing and unearthing the freedom and full potential of women and children in Ghana and the world over.
